

- 4 -

Abstract

5 Method for detecting the maximum quantity of possible positions of an exchangeable nosepiece or slide in a microscope system. Starting from an initial position which corresponds to a first position, the maximum position is adjusted. This maximum position is compared with a position registered in a memory and the results of the comparison are stored.